Threads of Nature

Dramatic designs and dynamic patterns

A collection that pays homage to the patterns we find in nature — motifs that nod to the complexity of nature as told by the interruptions of her artistry against otherwise smooth backdrops. Lightning against a dark sky, the jagged patterns of surf on a rough sea and interlacing branches of complex canopies. The pieces in the collection would all include a more dynamic / disruptive pattern rather than a subtle or flowing expression.

"From Depths to Heights"

Colca Canyon, Peru

Amaranta V813

Calacatta marble-inspired quartz, featuring a white background with dynamic light grey and gold veining

Nestled in the heart of Peru, Colca Canyon stands as a testament to the awe-inspiring beauty of nature and the indomitable spirit of human endeavor. Carved by the relentless forces of time, this magnificent gorge stretches across the rugged landscape, reaching depths that challenge the limits of perception — inviting adventurers to step into a transformative realm of triumphant resilience and realized dreams.

Inspired by the warm sun bathing the canyon in golden hues, Amaranta's warm and cool veins capture the spectacular shadowplay of towering cliffs and cascading waterfalls that paint a mesmerizing canvas — where the condors gracefully soar amidst the vast expanse, and one can find solace and renewal.

Aurora Frost V741

Calacatta marble-inspired quartz, featuring a white background with dynamic light grey and taupe veining

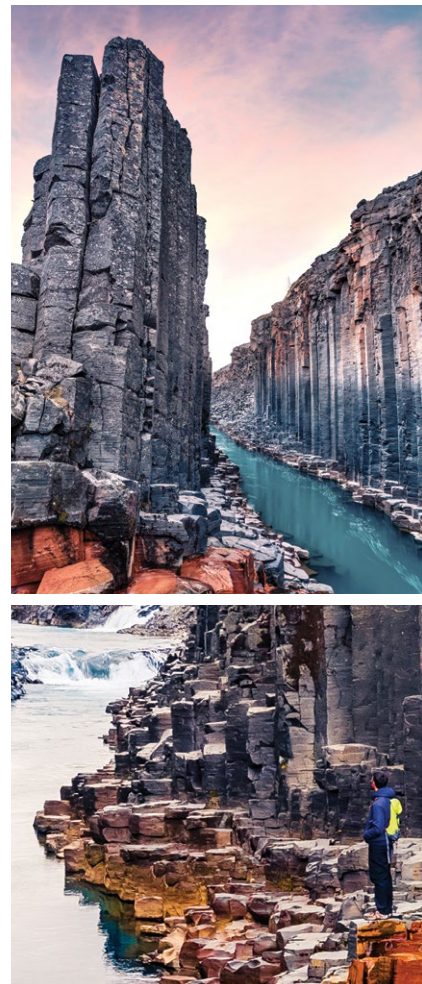

It's impossible to stand at the foot of Studlagil Canyon, and not be struck by the sense of something otherworldly. Towering blue-grey rock formations appear like mercurial mirrors shooting up from the cold glassy river, as streaks of cotton-candy clouds illuminate the sky. The softness of pink, white mist, and gently trickling water perfectly contrasts jutting towers of crystalline rock, rigid and imposing — creating an aesthetic balance, imperfect, inconsistent yet perfectly synchronized.

We bring this play of shadow and brilliance, of soft waters and lurid rock-face to Aurora Frost through dynamic blue-grey veining across a luminous white base. It's a style that is as dark and dynamic as it is luminous and light, bringing a sense of ethereal balance and icelandic majesty to your space.

Aurum V809

Calacatta marble-inspired quartz, featuring a white background with bold, dynamic gold and grey veining

In the glow of the setting Tuscan sun, rays of gold cascade through the once bustling city streets of Matera, Italy. Its peaked spires and steep winding roads of luminous stone are bathed in light before the sun sets. We recreate the scene of Matera's ancient city with Aurum's warm flowing veins that are set against a base of luminous light.

You can almost hear the distant church bell tolling, smell the fires glowing in hearths, feel the ethereal aura of a city bathed in twilight. Aurum's subtle but thick veins hark to Matera's winding roads. Warm hues set against a brilliant, clear base that brings luminosity to minimal designs. Pair it with rusts and golds, or find inspiration in bolder palettes for an unforgettable aesthetic.

"A Dance of Three Valleys"

Aosta Valley, Italy

Calacatta Belleza ^{V728}

Calacatta marble-inspired quartz, featuring a white background with bold, dynamic brown and grey veining

Calacatta Belleza was inspired by the stark white peaks and magnificent vistas of the Aosta Valley. Dramatic white mountains rise against the horizon as craggy cliffs ebb and flow; formed over thousands of years of ice coating and thawing, sculpting deep ravines and spires of rock.

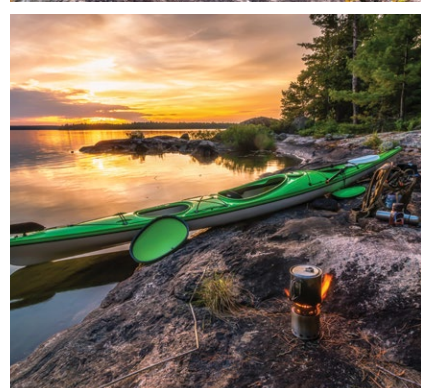

It's impossible to behold the scene of poise and grandeur standing at the foot of the Aosta valley without feeling part of something bigger than yourself. We wanted to capture the dance of light and dark, of peaks and shadows in the pattern of veins on our Calacatta Belleza — the differing sizes, a homage to seemingly random crevices and chasms, of ever-changing peaks. Set against a smooth, crisp white quartz, we hope to bring something of the valley's majestic, electric stillness, to your design.

"Darkness Meets Light"

Sunset Country, Ontario, Canada

Cygnnet Drift V803

Calacatta marble-inspired quartz, featuring a white background with dynamic light grey and brown veining

There's an unsung beauty to the palettes of greys, browns and blues along Canada's Ontario coast. Magnificent sunsets paint the horizon against a backdrop of sleepy rocks and gentle lapping waves. We set out to celebrate moments of light and dark, the warming sun and cooling shade, as well as glorious plays of golden skies.

In Cygnnet Drift, we let the patterns of nature guide us, mapping veins of light grey and brown across a white backdrop — capturing not just one element of the still majesty we found in Canada's 'Sunset Country', but the aesthetic as a whole; the perfect interplay of light and dark, of drifting patterns on the water and breath of wind through the treetops. An organic, multidimensional design bringing depth and subtle expression to your space.

Lava Plain V810

Calacatta marble-inspired quartz, featuring a bright white background with bold, dynamic black veining

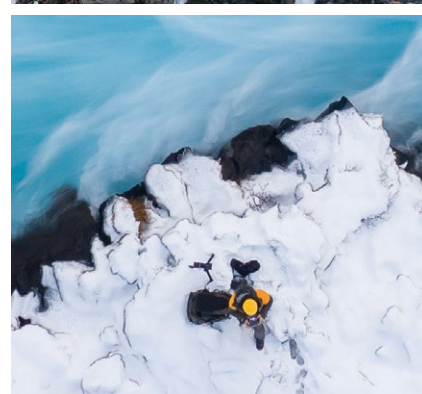

In western Iceland, the Barnafoss waterfall bursts from plains of ancient lava, where flurries of fresh fallen snow cover stone of the deepest onyx. When designing the patterns in Lava Plain, we set out to recreate this dramatic scene of flowing water and ancient stone, of cool white and bubbling aqua, of deep-set grooves, enriched with earth's pure minerals.

These are sweeping veins and a play of contrasts — defined, dramatic charcoal against a stark white background reimagine the feeling of standing at the peak of Barnafoss waterfall. Reveling in a scene that simultaneously feels ever moving and frozen in time. Lava Plain is a dramatic design that makes a statement in minimal spaces and scandi-esque aesthetics. The perfect compliment to lush greens or pared back tones.

Nordic Storm V737

Calacatta marble-inspired quartz, featuring a bright white background with bold, dynamic black and light grey veining

The perfect contrast of light and shadow, a yin and yang of ice over waters so dark they appear black. In Nordic Storm, we wanted to explore extremes of contrast, and the striking balance of complete opposites. Our inspiration came from Norway's Lofoten archipelago, where stormy waters whip up beneath the ice, forming cracks that fall like an intricate web of black and grey ribbons across the stark white surface.

We played with dimensions of threads on quartz, seemingly random but working together to heighten the contrast between the darkest shadow and the lightest white. Echoing the sound of cracks in ice, and the whistle of wind dancing across the surf, we examined the juxtapositions between storm and stillness, and the beauty of the two combined.

"Rising Above the Abyss"

Fjadrargljúfur Canyon, Iceland

Phantom Trail V814

Calacatta marble-inspired quartz, featuring a white background with dynamic light grey veining

In the depths of Fjadrargljúfur, Iceland's awe-inspiring canyon, stands as a breathtaking testament to the unyielding determination of nature. Carved over millennia by a relentless glacial river, this awesome canyon paints a vivid portrait of resilience and beauty. As you traverse the rugged terrain and gaze upon the sheer cliffs that tower above, a sense of wonder and rejuvenation washes over you.

Phantom Trail's cool, wandering veins whisper the secrets of endurance, inviting you to witness the harmony between strength and fragility. Echoing the tapestry of a powerful river, cascading waterfalls, moss-covered rocks and vibrant wildflowers — we are forever reminded that even the mightiest forces can be shaped and molded by time.

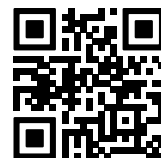

"Ledge of the World"

Sunset at Tunnel View, Yosemite National Park, California, USA

Phoenix Sky ^{V805}

Calacatta marble-inspired quartz, featuring a white background with dynamic light grey and gold veining

There are few places on earth where you feel at the edge of the world; Yosemite National Park is one of these. Craggy cliffs climb up towards a brilliant pink and red sky, rising and falling, phoenix-like, sometimes painted in beautiful golden shades, and other times steeped in sleepy shadows. Here, patterns form patiently over time, the composition of nature's veins aesthetically perfect and yet completely unintentional.

We set out to recreate the depth of shade and radiant light in Phoenix Sky's subtle veins of grey and gold, set against a luminous white backdrop. A translucent base and organic pattern of flowing veins adds dimension, a nod to Yosemite's cloud steeped peaks and deep sweeping valleys; mimicking the random aesthetic of nature's patterns.

Sierra Cirrus V735

Calacatta marble-inspired quartz, featuring a bright white background with bold, dynamic light brown-taupe veining

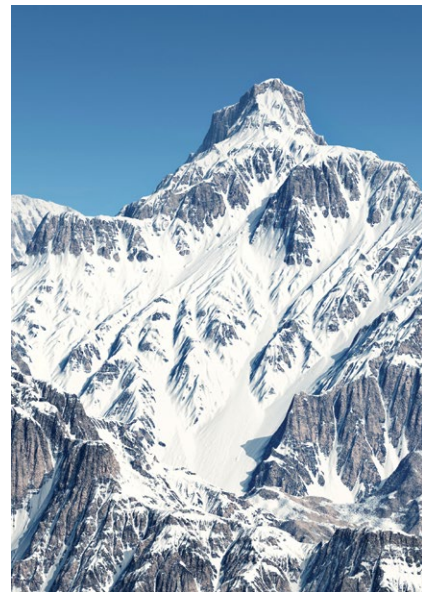

There are few places on earth more humbling, majestic and utterly enchanting than the Himalayan mountains. In Sierra Cirrus, we wanted to answer that innate human curiosity to own the unknown and the highest place on earth — with luminous peaks of jagged movement, somehow seeming both soft and asperous, exhilarating and all-consuming.

Through a flowing composition of bold taupe shading against a radiant backdrop, this design articulates a drift of cirrus clouds, appearing above the mountain peaks — perfectly mirroring the smooth vistas and misty, white valleys. It's a style that's about permanent beauty and temporary wonder, bringing a sense of ice and altitude, conveyed through patterns of shade against brilliant white — adding a luminous aesthetic and bold radiance to your design.

Sterling Light V804

Calacatta marble-inspired quartz, featuring a white background with dynamic light grey veining

The light is somehow different as it swirls across the undulating hills of Austria's South Styria Vineyards — softer, lighter, as if pouring through a glass of crisp white summer wine. There's an immense feeling of stillness in the verdant pastures, a promise of pause, a song of summer air and idyllic palettes of greens and ambers.

We wanted to capture the play of shadows on South Styria's golden fields in Sterling Light's design. A backdrop of white tells of early morning rays and soft subtle veins, of the shadows of dawn and dusk playing across a patchwork of grooves and golden fields. Sterling Light invites you to explore its subtle patterns, and lose yourself in a perfect moment of fresh, sterling serenity.

White Aurora V738

Calacatta marble-inspired quartz, featuring a white background with dynamic light grey and gold veining

We wanted to capture the golden mist of the Yu Long River, China, as sunrise cloaks the valley in gilded sheets of brilliant amber. Articulating warm hues in swirling mist-like veins helped us illustrate the golden breath of rays, turning majestic mountain peaks into glowing silhouettes, and flowing waters into liquid gold.

We were inspired by sheets of light falling through the clouds, appearing like a gentle Aurora — a gift to those who pause for long enough to enjoy it. There's a playful stillness to the twisting valleys and kaleidoscope of shade across the horizon which we paint through dynamic shadows of subtle veins against a cloudy white surface. White Aurora brings the same wonder of the amber mist to your design inviting you to lose yourself in a golden pause.

Blanco Venato ^{V719}

Marble-inspired quartz, featuring a white background with wispy blue-grey veining

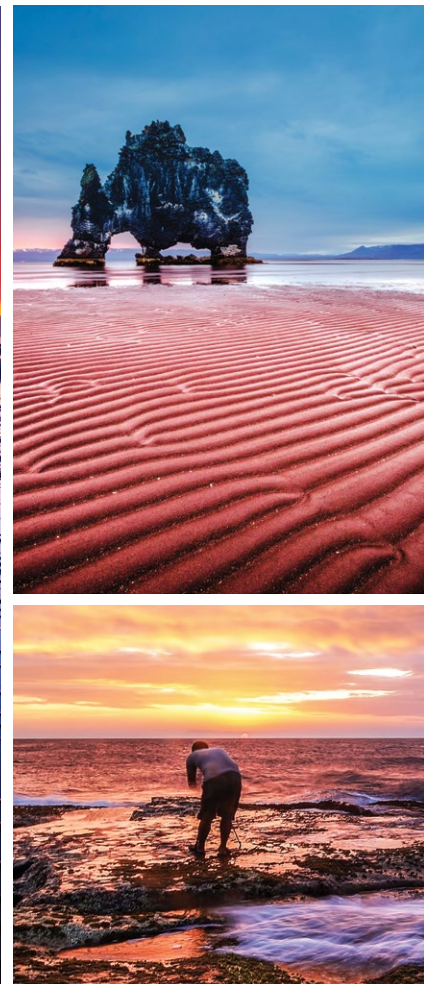

A land of legends, of celestial lights and rolling horizons, time is never more intangible than it is at, on a crisp icelandic dawn. Beams of light flash pink and crimson, illuminating shadows and textures, ripples of water and patterns of sand. In Blanco Venato, we wanted to explore Iceland's aesthetic of magic and mystery at a macro level, exploring the beauty of gentle undulating sand revealed as the veil of tide pulls back.

We explored the play of dawn's shadows on the surface of rippling beaches through wispy blue-grey veining against a luminous background — illustrating the flash of dawn's light, texture of shadows and gentle ruffles of sandy banks. Blanco Venato balances a Scandinavian minimal aesthetic with dynamic movement and captivating stillness of an icelandic dawn.

Bronzo V724

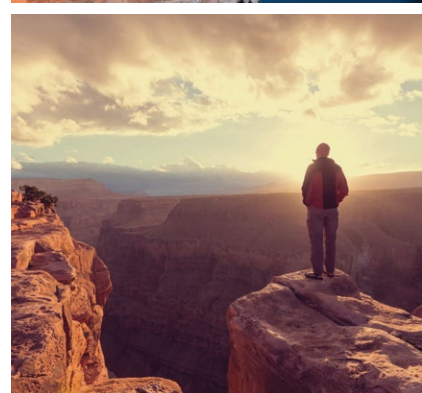

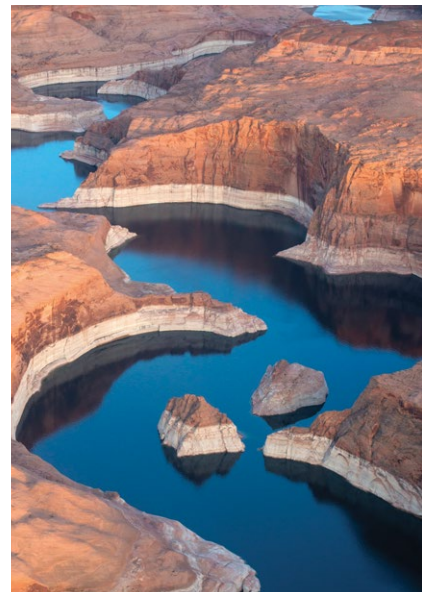

Calacatta marble-inspired quartz, featuring a white background with large, flowing taupe and grey veining

Inspired by the movement of rivers cutting through ruddy ridges and sunwashed sands of the Arizona desert, Bronzo's veins are wide and flowing. Standing at the vista of Alstrom Point, Lake Powell, a kaleidoscope of shifting shade blends hues of copper into gentle greys — a soft contrast to a brilliant white backdrop.

There's an ancient echo to the canyon; valleys and vistas sprawling out with the timeless eternity of a place both centuries and seconds old. We set out to recreate the blurring of elements where waters join the bank in gently blended veins of taupe and grey, some vast and sweeping, others gently threading. Bronzo mirrors the contrasts of pause and flow we found at Alstrom Point, so you can bring the same sense of dynamic stillness to your space.

"Desert Waves"

Calacatta Dorada ^{V727}

Marble-inspired quartz, featuring a white background with wispy taupe veining

Inspired by the soft windswept dunes of the Khali Desert, Calacatta Dorada sweeps waves of gentle veining across a luminous white background. Like the space between stars, the vast dune pockets of Abu Dhabi's Khali desert hold a sense of in-between, a space for imagination, for dreams and mirage as stretches of sand spin into infinity.

Shades of copper, red and gold undulate with the rise and fall of sand dunes, flowing in soft waves that sometimes appear alight, and other times sleeping in shade. Past and present, sky and sand merge into a capsule of space and possibility in Khali's ocean of shifting white sands and wispy soft waves. We designed this feeling of openness in subtle veins against brilliant white, so you can find it in your space.

Crimson Peak

"In the Highest Forest"

Druk Wangyal Chortens and Gangkhar Puensum, Bhutan

Crimson Peak V806

Viola marble-inspired quartz, featuring a white background with flowing maroon and red veining

Crimson Peak's flurry of maroon veins, in sprawling patterns across the stark white base, was inspired by the highest peak of Dochula Mountain Pass. Treading in the footsteps of ancients, the Himalayan mountain range sprawls into the misty distance. Only from the highest vantage can you view the expanse of winding, tree-dense cascades, damp with dew in deepening shades of maroon against the snow-peaked mountains.

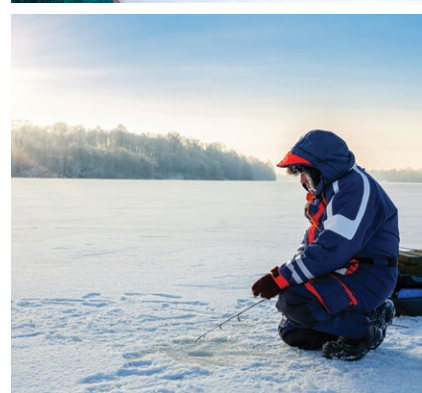

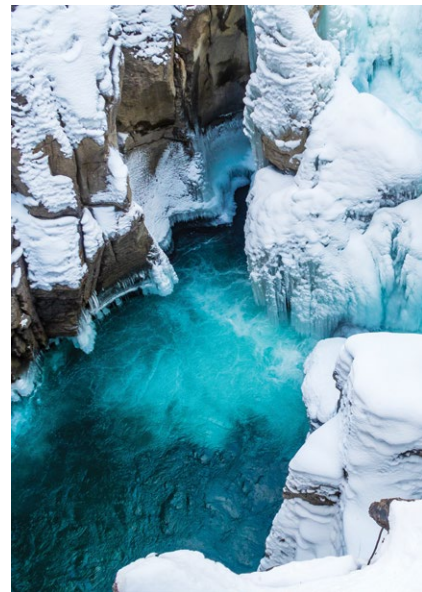

As if viewed through the eyes of a sweeping bird, a sense of space, expanse and calm is mirrored in the lush weavings of mauve, veins intertwining across a luminous backdrop of stark white stone. A bold design that makes a dramatic statement, as unique in its contrasting shades of crimson and luminescent white, as the scene that inspired it.

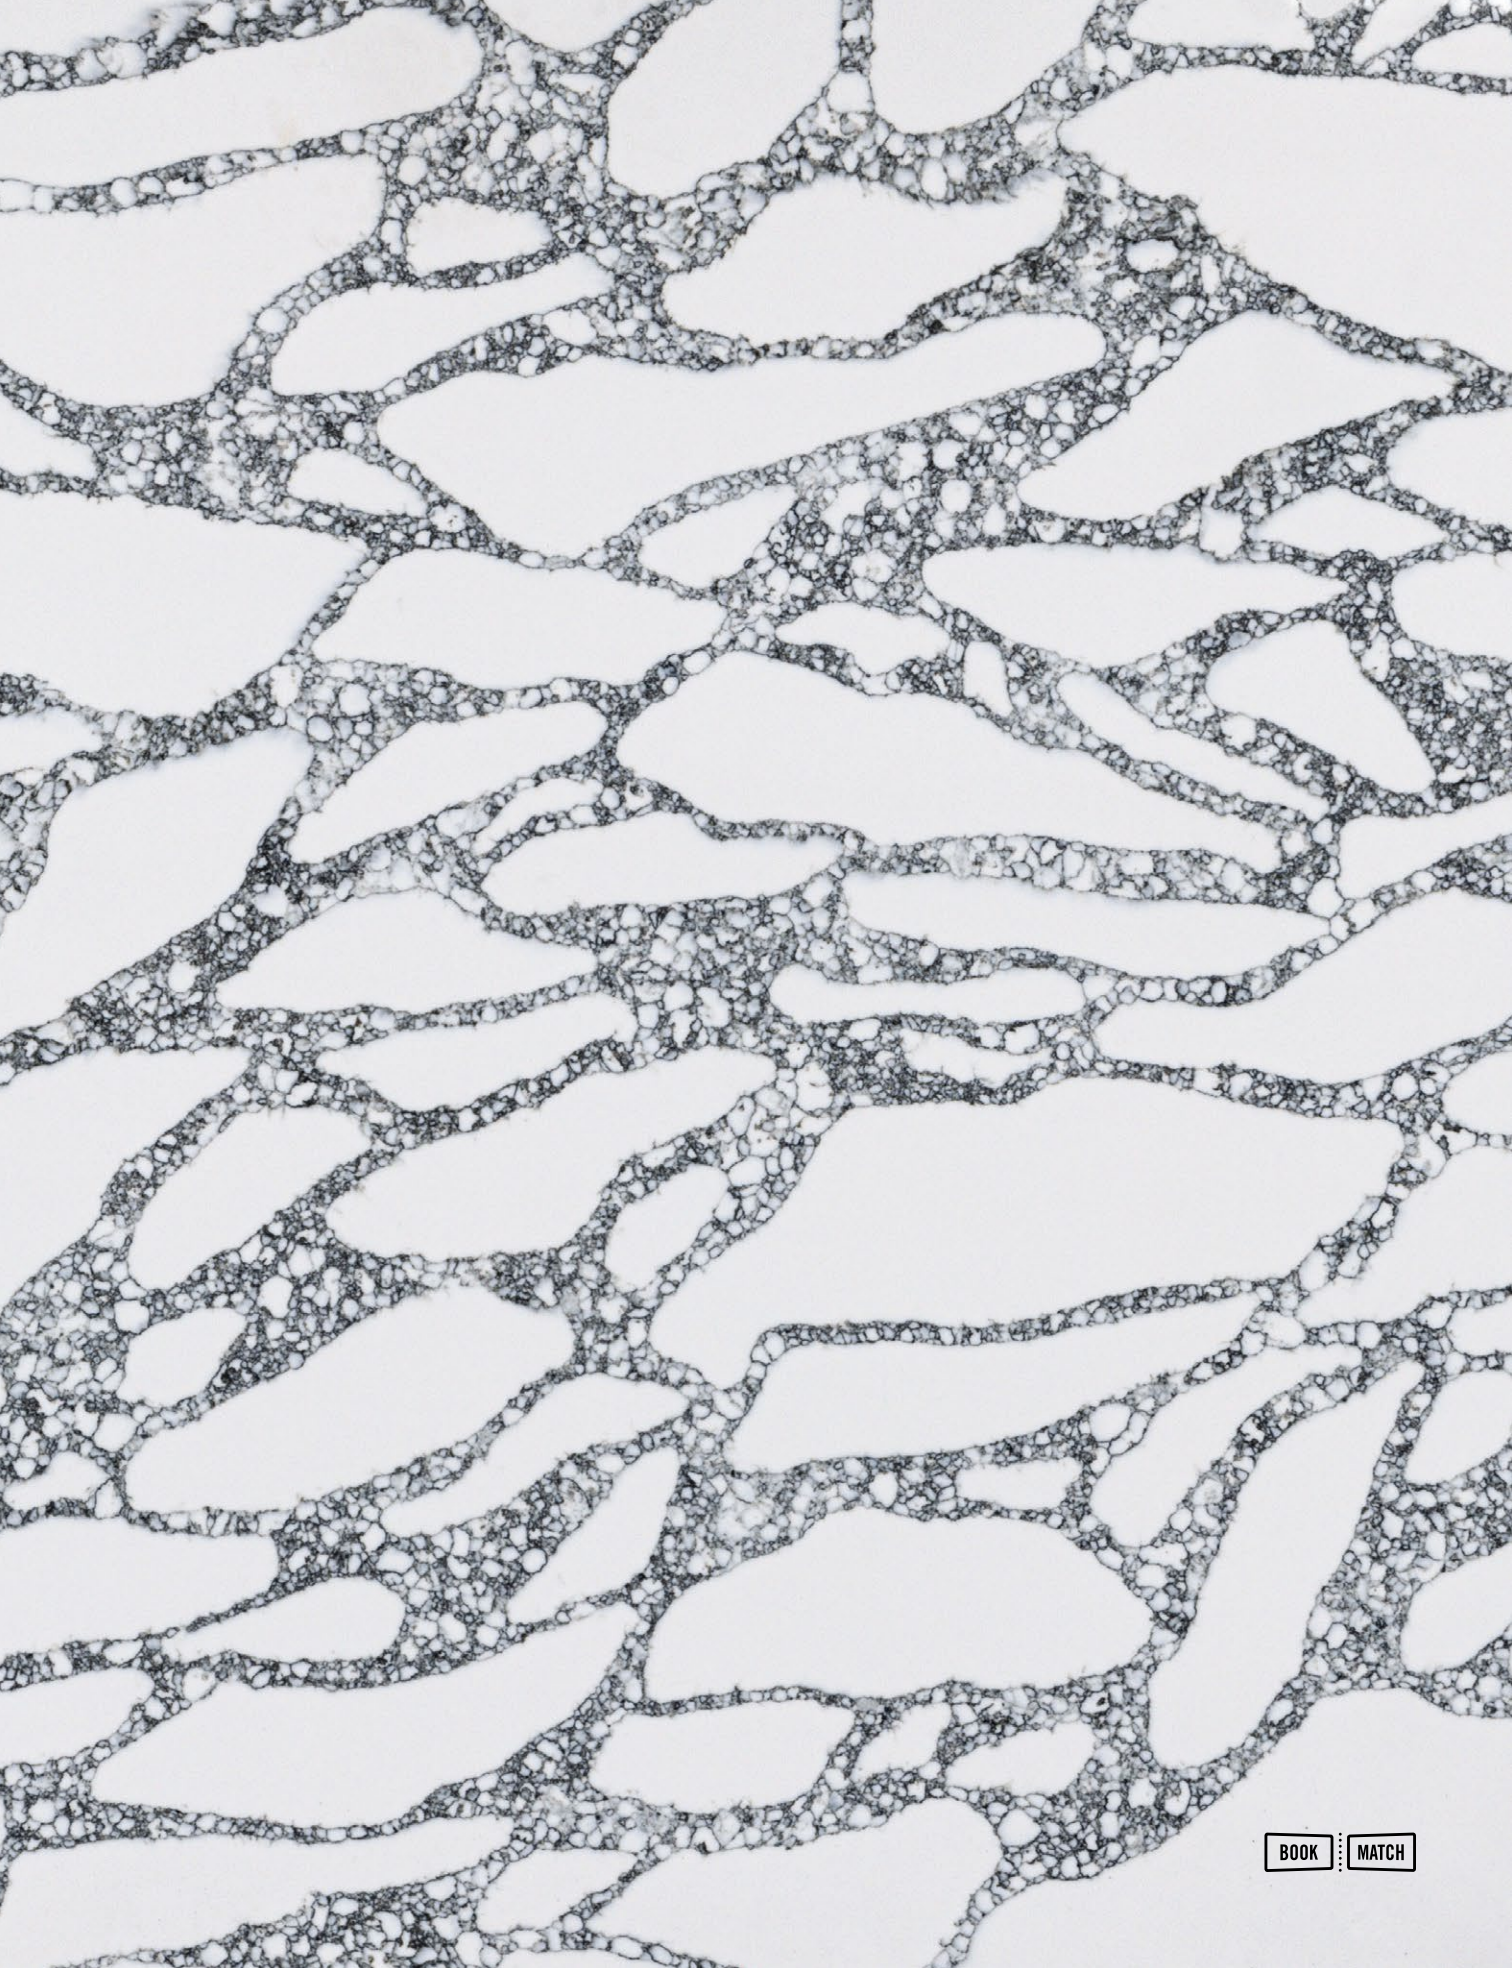

Nakoda V807

Arabescato Corchia marble-inspired quartz, featuring a white background with flowing charcoal veining

Treading across an expanse of ice that freezes deep aquamarine lakes, thickets of snow climb and stretch as far as the eye can see. This is a place where sacred silence stills the senses. Nakoda's white luminous base intertwines with intricate forms and beautiful veins that crisscross over the stark stone. Inspired by Jasper National Park in Canada, this surface is a marriage of the natural charcoal stone found there and a hint of the green and flurry.

On a sunny day the peaks and valleys glow brilliantly, in perfect contrast to the myriad of shady nooks that cascade across the horizon. With a unique twist, Nakoda's patterns of charcoal veins, tipped with the subtlest green bring a bold and unexpected choice to modern spaces, a centerpiece for minimal designs or bolder interior visions.

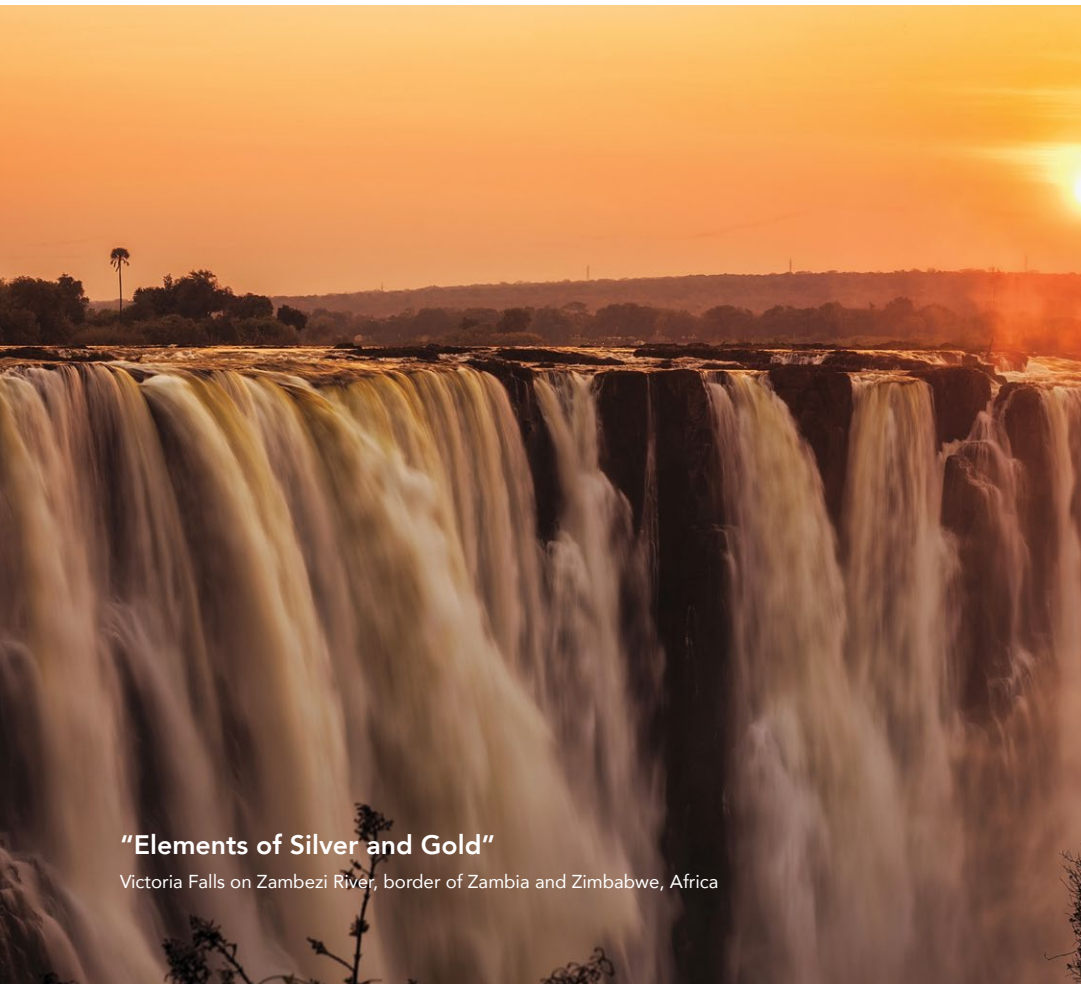

Naurelle V605

Marble-inspired quartz, featuring a bright white background with wispy taupe veining

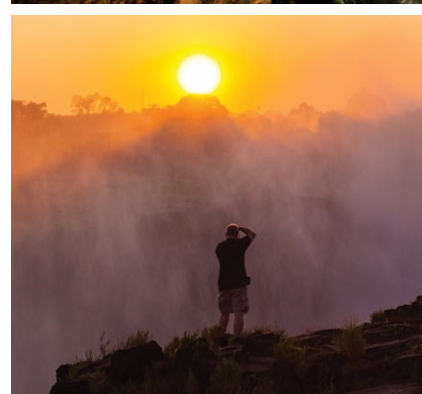

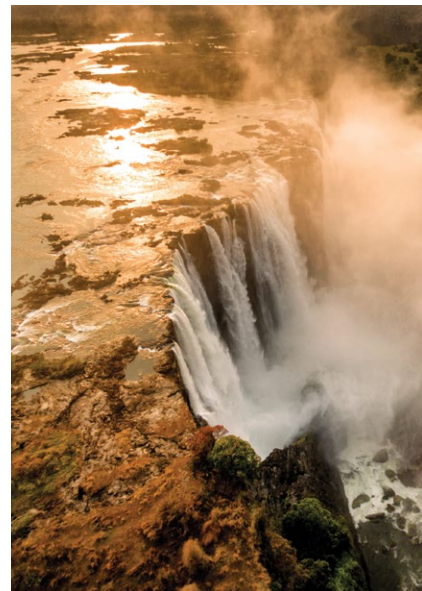

We found our inspiration for Naurelle's jagged patterns and diffused taupe veins in Victoria Falls, Zambia. The sun sets behind mighty mountains, as thunderous falls cascade like silvery hair of an all-powerful deity. Victoria Falls is the stuff of legends. It tells a story of the play of light and dark, of gaseous white mist and towering black cliffs — and of countless jets, all separate, but from a distance, one.

We retell it in hues of radiant white and wispy veining, that cross and stretch, their pattern mimicking the direction of watery cascades and the feeling of timeless magnificence as the falls tumble down on a journey that is theirs and theirs alone. In Naurelle, we hope to bring this tale of the triumph of natural beauty to your space.

Naurelle Grey V606

Marble-inspired quartz, featuring a bright white background with wispy grey veining

Flashes of lightning streak across a cloudy sky as a storm rolls into the bay at Trieste, Italy. Here we found our inspiration for Naurelle Grey's dramatic veins and electric white backdrop. We wanted to capture the unearthly still between lightning appearing and thunder's clap, the thrill you feel watching this feat of almost unearthly power, and the memory that stays with you even after the night is once again velvety, starless and still. Candescant flashes illuminate the clouds, water and the bay beyond for a moment in brilliant light and then entirely disappear.

We recreated the crack of thunder with jutting veins and bold contrasts, echoing the all-encompassing flash, and magnetic energy of a lightning strike, translating it into quartz through dramatic cracks, and contrasts of night and light.

Sand Weaver's gentle, flowing veins and uncluttered clean base gives a sense of openness, space and light to your room.

Carrara V509

Marble-inspired quartz, featuring a white background with diffused grey veining

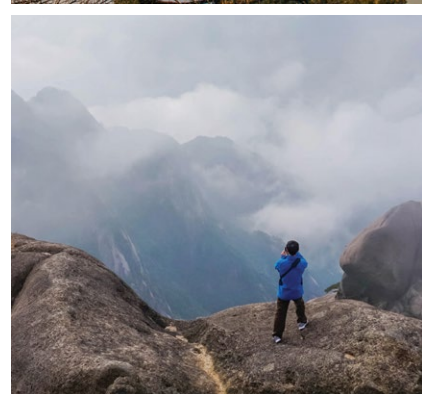

Carrara pays homage to the ethereal landscape of Mount Huangshan, China. The rugged ridges and craggy crowns of the Yellow Mountain are at times obscured by fog floating gracefully in drifts of complex grey swirls, wrapping peaks and treetops with an ethereal mist.

We wanted to recreate the sense of exhalation you feel when the mist parts and the mountain reveals itself slowly, as if waking up from an ancient sleep; shadows of cliffs only just peering beneath the canopy of misty white. We hope to instill the same alluring curiosity we found through soft, drifting patterns of gentle grey veining, against a backdrop of luminous white. Inviting you to explore a scene sometimes only just hidden from view, and other times revealed in full grandeur.

Fiore V801

Marble-inspired quartz, featuring a bright white background with faint grey veining

In Ukraine's Carpathian Mountains, frozen lakes stand still and serene. Trees bow, heavy under the silent strain of snowfall, and yet there's a warmth you find surrounded by this wintery wonderland. It was this sense of frozen welcome which we wanted to explore through spidery veins and brilliant white quartz.

When you take that first step off the banks of a frozen lake, peering past the opaque surface and trails of brilliant white streaked cracks, you can just about make out water still moving gently underfoot, while all around the icy breath of winter cloaks your senses with its silent stillness. We paint the play of frozen movement in the pattern of veins and brilliant hues, creating a sense of welcoming minimalism.

Marbella V800

Superwhite marble-inspired quartz, featuring an off-white and grey background with diffused taupe and grey veining

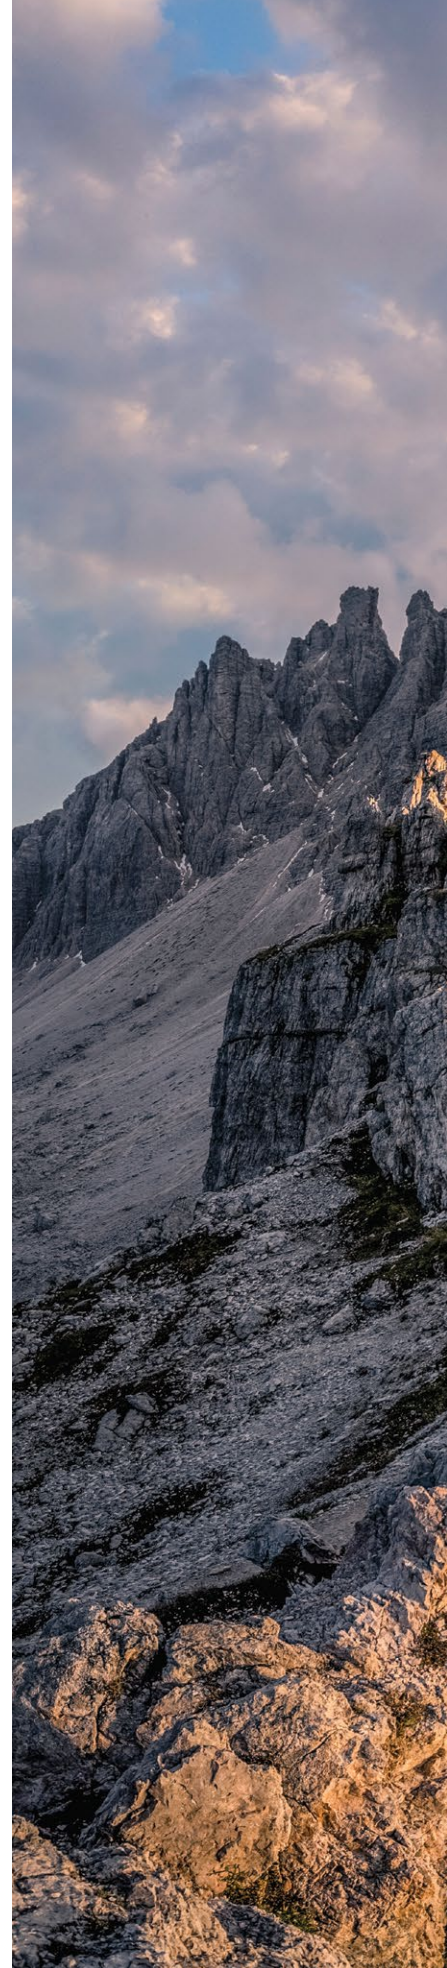

Pristine remains of a long extinct sea, Utah's expanse of dreamscape salt pans extend in every direction, as far as the eye can see. On a cloudy day they almost seem part of the drift as they stretch into the horizon, beaming back sunlight of lustrous brilliance, with only wisps of shade patterning the stark white salty desert with delicate markings.

We mimic the sheer brilliance of Utah's salt pans in Marbella's minimal aesthetic, hoping to bring something of the energy, and radiance of the vast salt pans, reflecting the desert sun with dazzling beams of light, each a tiny mirror, luminous, beaming and utterly mesmerizing. Marbella's wisps of grey shading, diffused yet discernable, are a nod to the mirage of desert heat, and the barely-there pattern of crystalline forms.

Calacatta Oro V733

Quartzite-inspired quartz, featuring an off-white and grey background with bold, dynamic brown and grey veining

We found our inspiration for this design at Dead Horse Point State Park, Utah. Looking down into the canyon at sunset, you experience the embers of light falling like a curtain of fire over every crevice and peak, illuminating the intricate art of its steadfast stone fortresses.

Deep in the belly of the valley, the Colorado River carves its winding way through fiery formations, oblivious to its contrast against the mighty peaks and jagged paths. We wanted to capture the electric intensity of the valley as it comes to life in reds and golds, and balance of coolness in the snaking shape of the river below — recreated in flowing veins across grey and white quartz. Calacatta Oro is both shade and fire, filled with mesmerizing energy and gentle lull of nightfall.

Ostara Dawn V743

Quartzite-inspired quartz, featuring a white background with delicate taupe and grey veining

The desert is never as enchanting, dynamic and playful as it is during the dance of sunrise. At Zabriskie Point, California, stark white sand dunes come to life as the first rays disperse night's shadows. There's a kind of poetry to the play of light across sculpted canyons and singing dunes, appearing to coax the sand from its long night's sleep.

We hope to bring this feeling of gentle awakening to Ostara Dawn through undulating drifts of threads across a brilliant white surface, exploring the movement of shadow across golden sand, the coolness of the air and brilliant flashes of morning light. Ostara Dawn invites you to explore the liminal beauty of a waking desert somewhere between the cloak of darkness and the fire of daylight sun.

Petra Grigio V703

Quartzite-inspired quartz, featuring a two-toned dark grey background with subtle white veining

The electric energy of darkness is rarely as visceral, raw and all-consuming as in Hawaii's frozen lava fields. There's a beautiful strangeness in the duet of moving water and shores of charred earth, still humming with the life force of long frozen lava. Ropes of undulating basaltic rock seem to flow in stillness, emanating with an ancient song of the sheer force of nature, creating and reshaping the magnificent shore.

Petra Grigio embodies this vibrancy of darkness, expressing threads of subtle white across a rich two-toned grey background. Complex patterns echo the intricate wave formations etched into pahoehoe lava over thousands of years, and the glow of their smooth surface in the fire of the setting sun. The aesthetic embodies a vitality of shadow, and timeless spark of molten fire.

Spikey crowns of tangled branches paint the sleepy misty valley and craggy plateau with a feeling of life and movement.

The perfect juxtaposition of boldness and diffused natural shade, of playful tangled branches and gentle rolling hills is an image of resilience and imagination. We bring this story to life in Sereno Bianco's elaborate swirls of dense grey veining, the cloud-like background appearing energized by the complex bursts, stretching, like the trees they were inspired by, towards a lifegiving misty sky with a play of natural shade against grey and white.

Sky Dance V746

Superwhite quartzite-inspired quartz, featuring a two-toned off-white and grey background with flowing grey veining

With lively jagged rock patterns against soft layers of sunbaked clouds, Sky Dance replicates a shifting, changing, transfixing scene, frozen in time like a breath waiting to be exhaled — the sense of an event waiting to happen, and a timeless moment that holds your every sense.

Inspired by the undulating terrain of Goreme National Park, Turkey — dramatic threads cascade across a cloudy white – gray base, a play of shadows as the setting sun casts grooves and valleys, shifting with the movement of clouds. Once a year a flurry of hot air balloons float across the rocky cascades, bright colors and light dancing on the horizon. We pay homage to this scene in Sky Dancer's flowing veins – a design that marries harmoniously with colorful tones.

Solano Bella V731

Quartzite-inspired quartz, featuring an off-white and grey background with delicate grey veining

We found our inspiration for Solano Bella in the swells and ripples of Plitvice Lakes National Park, Croatia. Here, centuries of flowing waters etch a landscape of almost impossible beauty, each drop artfully sculpting the rock into dreamy shapes, lace-like in appearance, and thunderous in their strength.

We found a kind of poetry in the juxtaposition of whispering jets and the timeless might of their cascades, shaping the mountain to their will over hundreds of years. Solano Bella recalls the roar of the water, warmth of the autumn sun and the reminder we found here, that strength can be found in even the most delicate beauty. In recreating the play of elegance and strength we found at Croatia's most picturesque waterfalls, this style brings dramatic complexity to your space.

Moon Valley ^{V811}

Macchia Vecchia Calacatta marble-inspired quartz, featuring a white background with bold dynamic brown and rust veining

Penned into history by the author T.E Lawrence, a timeless description of Jordan's ancient rock formations in Wadi Rum describes hills that grow tall and sharp, towering for thousands of feet, with crabs capped in a nest of domes. Ancient Byzantine architecture is mirrored in the shaded caves, towering peaks and deep red stone, tinged pink in the setting sun that once shone over the empires of the past.

Moon Valley's soft, off-white background and warm, wide veins tipped with gentle shades of rust and gold pay homage to this ethereal scene, lit by the luna glow — the still of the desert, the warmth of the sand and the luminous moon. Inspired by Japan's Nijo Castle's cherry blossom festival, Sakura's warm tones fall against deep nutmeg branches. White intermingles with gray and multilayered patterns tell a story of ethereal blooms, and of a floating world steeped in transient wonder. We recreate this scene where the most fleeting but enchanting beauty is celebrated — the juxtaposition of the last blush of spring and the rain-drenched branches in Sakura's cloudy surface.

The gray-hued, clouded backdrop animates with delicate veins — some bold and deep, some gentle like a falling cloud of petals. The play of light and dark, of soft clouds and deeper tones bring a gentler expression to your design, marrying perfectly with bolder statement pieces, or minimal aesthetics.
